Flash Fire Mars Florida Trip

By John Picinich
Staff Writer

A bus en route to Daytona Beach, Florida, went up in flames near Exit Two of the New Jersey Turnpike on Friday, April 13. The Community Co. bus was transporting 48 Montclair State students, 31 female students and 17 male students.

Thomas Milner, sole chaperone of the Florida trip, stated that no campus organization sponsored the trip vacation. "It was just a student-run trip," he said.

The excursion to Daytona Beach was initially planned to be a nine day long vacation, with the students boarding in 12 reserved rooms at the Riviera Hotel, according to Milner.

Before fire enveloped the bus, students had heard a "thumping noise," Milner related. Milner, Charlie Hecht, general manager of WVMS, Ken Miller and the bus driver investigated the tires of the bus, finding that the inner rear tire on the right side had a "chunk of tire out," Milner said.

Milner also stated the driver said that the tire slash would eventually wear off once the bus resumed its scheduled run to Daytona.

"Heat and friction of the inner tire rubbing against the outer tire caused both tires to smoke," Milner said, "the bus stopped and all the

When smoke started to enter the bus some of the students started to panic, some jumping out of the windows once the bus stopped, according to Milner.

Milner related that he and the bus driver extinguished the small fire with a fire extinguisher. However, passing trucks on the Turnpike created a wind that reignited the fire twice. The third time, he said, the bus caught on fire, intense heat causing the windows to pop.

"Within five minutes the bus went up in flames," he said.

Milner stated that he then went to a telephone booth and called the president of Community Bus Co., John Gallagher, asking the company president to cancel the remainder of the trip and send a bus to return the students to the campus.

Gallagher told Milner to calm down and "made an offer that he would send another bus and $4000 in cash if the trip continued," Milner said.

Hecht stated that 40 students lost all luggage and personal items such as cameras, textbooks and wallets in the fire.

Milner then came back to the scene of the fire and took a poll of all the students on whether to continue or not. "Many students lost all their money and clothes," he emphasized, "but they all decided to continue the trip."

The new bus, after a stop in Fayetteville, N.C. to pick up a new bus driver and other scheduled stops throughout the journey for food and refreshment, reached Jacksonville, Florida, without further mishap. "The students spent two hours in Jacksonville shopping for clothes," Milner stated.

"An insurance company of the bus company will settle all claims" the students have on their lost property, Milner said.

Richardson Not Proposed To Succeed Marburger

By Carla Capizzi and
Patricia Mercorelli
Staff Writers

Although MSC President Thomas H. Richardson's name was not included in a list of recommendations for replacements to Carl L. Marburger, former Commissioner of Education, there is still "a reasonable opportunity that he might be appointed."

That statement was made by James H. Mullen, president of Jersey City State College. Mullen is a member of a group of former and present college and bank heads who are moving to make Richardson a candidate for the position.

The recommendations were submitted to NJ Governor William T. Cahill by the state Board of Education at Cahill's request. The governor has the power to appoint the commissioner but his appointment is subject to approval by the NJ legislature.

Neither Richardson's name nor the name of Dr. Edward Kilpatrick was included in the list. Kilpatrick was named Acting Commissioner of Education by Cahill on March 2.

Thomas H. Richardson
Still Has Chance -

Although Mullen was "surprised" that Richardson's name was not among those recommended to the governor, he explained that this "does not necessarily mean he is not being considered." "I think he is well-qualified and has support in the state," Mullen explained. "I wouldn't rule out the possibility that he is a candidate even if he wasn't mentioned in the magazine article," he continued. The list of recommendations was published last Sunday in a Newark Star Ledger article by Robert J. Braun.

Mullen does not foresee a permanent appointment in the near future. "The logical time to make the decision is after the (November gubernatorial) election," he stated. He added that there is a "possibility a Democrat will be elected; then that's a whole new ball game."

The group has received "a number of positive replies," Mullen declared, and it intends to contact those who responded. He thinks that those who have already written should make their views "publically known."

Gulf Protest Stepped Up

By Diane Forden
Staff Writer

The movement to remove Gulf Oil from campus is escalating according to senior psychology/history major Lloyd Furbert, spokesman for the Task Force Against Racism.

Furbert said, "I believe in the decency of the students but feel that they have not become more actively involved because of their ignorance of the situation. Our primary concern is the oppression in Africa," he continued. "It is true that other oil companies are based in Africa but the difference is that they are operating through the sovereign states whereas Gulf is cooperating with and supporting the Portuguese in Mozambique. The Portuguese are exploiting the Africans and deriving economic benefits from them," he concluded.

Furbert also acknowledged that the MSC Gulf Action Group is being funded but would not reveal the source.

Despite the expanding protest, there has been no direct contact between Gulf officials and the MSC protestors. Furbert noted that Michael Lowenthal, Student Center director and Gregg Carroll, the Center's assistant director, contacted the company but "Gulf did not see fit to send representatives. We are still attempting to get in touch with the NY Gulf office to see if they'll send representatives," Furbert said.

A forum, entitled "Struggle in Africa" is scheduled for today, April 26 in Ballroom C of the Student Center from 11 am to 1:30 pm. A film illustrating the African situation will be shown and speakers from several national groups will explain the Gulf position in Africa.

Blumenstock Cops Top Sports Award

"I have no comment," said Kathy Blumenstock as she went into jock shock upon receiving first prize in the Pi Delta Epsilon Sportswriting Contest. The Montclair State sophomore was the first woman in the history of the contest to cop the top spot for sportswriting.

The winning story, headlined "Of Knees and Cleats and Drugs and Turf," appeared in the MONTCLARION on December 15 and was the second of a two-part series on knee injuries.

BLUMENSTOCK, A MONTCLARION copy editor and sportswriter, was awarded a $25 check and a gold engraved letter-opener on Tuesday afternoon in the MONTCLARION office as a crowd of about 12 clapped and cheered.

The prize was presented by Carol Sakowitz, who, along with Mary Jude Smith and editor-in-chief Susan Kelly, had attended the Pi Delta Epsilon national convention in Macon, Ga. It was at the convention that awards were announced for all aspects of collegiate journalism: news writing, editorials, features and photography, along with sportswriting.

In addition to writing for the MONTCLARION, Blumenstock is also the sports editor for the South Bergenite, a weekly paper published in Rutherford. She has also had several articles published in The New York Times in the New Jersey Sports feature column and was commissioned to write a feature story for The Times about Kevin Cooney, a former pitcher for the MSC baseball team currently pitching for the Minnesota Twins farm team in the Western League.

MONTCLARION/James D. Hile

THE LONE CANDIDATE — SGA president Sam Crane is running unopposed for the position of student representative on the Board of Trustees.

Referendums Question Cum And Class Funding

Student Government election time is around the corner. Along with voting for the various executive offices and legislative posts, there will be three referendum issues on the ballot.

In order for the results of the referendum to be valid, 30% of the student body must vote. The results, if valid, will become effective June 1, 1973.

The first referendum question concerns the lowering of this percentage from the present 30% to 15% of the student population.

ACCORDING to Kathy Ragan, current vice president of the SGA, not many of the students come out to vote in the elections. By lowering the percentage needed for validation of referendum issues, there is more of a possibility for referendum results to be bondafide, explained Ragan.

The second referendum question concerns the lowering of the cumulative grade point average required for all elected offices from the present 2.5 to 2.0. This will enable more students to run for office, Ragan stated. According to Ragan, a 2.0 cum is needed to stay in school and prevents anyone on academic probation from running for office.

The final referendum issue questions the effectiveness of the class structure. "Is it necessary to fund the classes?" is the question under discussion, according to Ragan.

"AT PRESENT the four classes do not partake in many of the activities of the college," stated Ragan. Aside from Homecoming and Carnival, where involvement is limited, the only class sponsored activities are Junior Ball and Senior Ball and Banquet.

Out of the $60 activity fee each student pays, $2.75 is allotted to the four classes. The junior and senior classes get 35% each and the freshmen and sophomore classes get 15% each of the total allotment.

SGA VICE-PRESIDENT:

...shall be the speaker of and preside over the meetings of the Student Legislature.

Tom Barrett

Instill "Initiative"

Vice-presidential candidate Tom Barrett would like to see the SGA legislature re-organized to make it more representative. He also feels the present committee system for legislative bills should be thoroughly researched.

Barrett sees "instilling initiative" as one of the vice-president's responsibilities. According to Barrett, the vice-president also should clarify a legislator's responsibilities and maintain communications with the reps.

PUBLIC RELATIONS, in Barrett's opinion, is an important aspect of the number two executive's role. He would embark on what he called a "good public relations program" to keep the student body informed of SGA actions.

Barrett says he is "willing to work for the students." He feels he has "been involved" and has "adequate experience" for the job. Currently he co-chairs the Committee on Commuter Affairs. He was instrumental in establishing the shuttle bus service last semester. Barrett is still involved with the shuttle and recently worked with the college administration to obtain two shelters for shuttle riders.

Tom Barrett

For the past two years, Barrett has been a member of the legislature. He also holds a seat on the Student Center Policy Board. Barrett served on his departmental Personnel Advisory Committee last year.

Expressing cautious optimism, Barrett said, "I can't say the SGA will be more responsive, but I'll give it a try."

Chris Breeden

Looks Toward Future

By Tom Benn
Staff Writer

"I'm a little cautious about listing my qualifications," says Chris Breeden. "I mean a guy says that he's been involved in all these different things and how, if he's elected, he's going to start bringing changes. Well, if he was involved, why haven't the changes already started appearing?" Breeden is a candidate for the vice-presidency of the SGA and rather than talk about what he has done in the past, he prefers to talk about what he will do in the future. He is a junior sociology major from Montclair.

"MY GOALS are first, to get more veterans involved in campus activities; second, to get HRL better funded and represented on campus; third, to get day care recognized as a vital part of the education process.

"I also want to re-evaluate appropriations and give them out a little more freely. I want to figure out the difference between Class One and Class Two organizations and see why one gets better funding. I want to disband the political machine and get new ideas, people and approaches into the SGA.

Will he win? Breeden says, "A man who makes a prediction on the event is either a fool or a hypocrite and I'm neither in this situation."

Betty O'Keefe

Wants More Cohesive SGA

By John Picinich
Staff Writer

Betty Ann O'Keefe, a co-chairperson of the Committee for Better Human Relations, is a candidate running for the SGA vice-presidency.

O'Keefe is president of the Students for Reform and Action, on the Campus Community Program Advisory Board and a member of the Central Committee of the Task Force for Action Against Racism.

AMONG THE issues on the platform that both she and Michael King, candidate for SGA presidency, are running on is a plan for a parentally controlled Daycare Center. "It (the Daycare Center) is a vital, real student need that would be open to the whole college community," she said.

The platform also calls for a breakdown of the Student Center budget as well as a letter to each student each semester with a breakdown of the $60 student activities fee, concise statements on each Class One organization and a "rationalization on how much each one receives," she commented.

O'KEEFE closed with the slogan of both she and King, "We listen ... We respond."

Deborah Gerdes

"Aware of" MSC Problems

By Rosemary Morra
Staff Writer

Deborah Gerdes, a sophomore psychology major, is among the nominees for SGA vice president.

Gerdes was appointed to the SGA legislature last September, where she became "aware of MSC's problems." She has been associated the appropriation committee, which reviews all monetary bills, and the goals retreat, which establishes future goals for both Class One organizations and SGA. After becoming more involved in MSC's political organizations, she decided to run for SGA's vice presidency.

If elected, Gerdes explained that she especially wants the SGA publicized more, since most students do not even know how their $60 activity fee is distributed.

Gerdes graduated from Kearny High School in 1971 where she was active in the student council and president of her sorority, Tri Sigma. As a freshman at MSC, she participated in last year's carnival and the freshman float for homecoming.

Presently she is an SGA legislator from the psychology department, secretary of her class, 1975 and treasurer of the psychology club.

SGA PRESIDENT :

The executive power shall be vested in the President of the Student Government Association.

Angelo Genova

"Bring The SGA Home"

"The SGA president has overstepped his bounds. He should deal with our own problems and not with massive programs that are impossible to get. He should bring the SGA home to what the students want," explained Angelo Genova, candidate for the SGA presidency.

Angelo Genova

"We cannot expect any student to have faith in the SGA until it proves that it can reach some tangible goals, no matter how minor. The problems of our campus must be met as top priority," emphasized the sophomore history major.

"NO MATTER how minor the problems, the SGA should deal with them. Improving our health center, reviewing the effectiveness of campus security and innovations in the curriculum are but a few areas where the SGA can be effective. Above all the students should know why things are the way they are. The SGA must be opened up so that students can decide its direction," continued Genova.

Genova has been an SGA legislator for two years and has served as president pro-tempore of the legislature for the past three semesters. He is also serving as chairman of the SGA Constitutional Review Committee.

Genova is currently president of the Class of '75 and a resident assistant in Stone Hall. He is also actively involved with the History Club, Health Center Services Committee and the Student Administration Faculty Everyone Committee (SAFE).

"IN PAST years the class organizations have shown themselves to be unviable. It's only in the past year or so that this trend has been reversed," said Genova. "I think we've got to take a long hard look at the class organizations before we decide their future," he added.

"The SGA has had a terrible problem of communication with the students, many of whom have been disillusioned to the point of total apathy," claims Genova. "I want to make the SGA something the students can feel; something that serves you, not disconcerts you. I want to make the SGA a human organization, not the formal, almost secretive organization it is now," he emphasized.

"The only way that we can bring the students back into the organization is to produce," he continued. "I plan to do just that."

Michael King

MSC: His "First Concern"

"We are concerned with the statewide organizing of students but our first and major concern is getting together MSC," says Michael King, SGA presidential contender.

King, a junior sociology major, stands easily over six feet with wavy, dark, disheveled hair. He wears an oversized button with his campaign slogan, "We listen... we respond". He speaks slowly, thoughtfully, quietly. He is perhaps best known for his lion's share role in securing a home for the Drop-In Center.

IN KEEPING with an emphasis on local politics, he outlines a platform shared by his running mate, Betty Anne O'Keefe, a vice presidential hopeful. King states they will push for a day care center at MSC "with parental control, not departmental or administrative control."

The platform headlines opposition to armed security guards and municipal ticketing on campus and proposes mailing SGA budget breakdowns to all students at the beginning of each semester. It supports establishing a faculty parking fee ("they should pay for choice parking"), and expanding the Student Center hours "to a more reasonable closing time."

Of particular interest to campus residents is King's recommendation that Class One organizations sponsor more weekend activities and his promise to investigate alternative food plans, making the meal ticket optional.

The King/O'Keefe platform also includes reinstating the tradition of ringing La Campana, the bell atop College Hall and choosing street names for the college's roadways.

"I AM A fighter. I speak up. I speak my mind," he says in confident tones. "Very important are the follow-ups to legislative bills, the groundwork, the footwork. In my administration the SGA legislature would take a more active role and I have the experience needed in coordinating people."

That experience includes positions as Drop In Center director, Public Relations director of the SGA, Human Relations Laboratory Chairman, Newman Community vice-president and others.

King is running as a write-in candidate because he did not meet the required cumulative average of 2.5. He explained that an error on his transcript was not changed in time to meet the SGA deadline.

Kathy Ragan

Understands SGA

"The SGA president should be someone who knows everything that is going on but shouldn't spread himself too thin. He or she should be able to delegate authority to SGA cabinet members or the legislature as the president's representative."

This is the philosophy expressed by Kathy Ragan, contender in next week's presidential contest and current SGA vice-president.

RAGAN EXPLAINED, "This was one of the things that went wrong this past year. The fault of this year's administration was too tight control and not enough delegation of authority."

The junior math major sees the questions of concrete student power and student space allocations as major campaign issues. She considers a student vote on the Board of Trustees and participation on the state bargaining board for faculty contracts as essential to student needs and power.

Continuity is important to the SGA, Ragan stated. She is running because she feels she can "provide continuity in the sense of understanding the functions and shortcomings of the SGA — what it can and can't accomplish."

RAGAN NOTED that in order to obtain a student vote on the board a state statute must be changed. "The best way to do this is to organize all the state colleges to petition for it. Now that the New Jersey Student Union is being organized, this may be the means to get a trustees vote."

The candidate also believes that students should have a say in faculty-state contract bargaining. "The students are the third party, but we never get to speak. If the faculty requested a cut in office-hour time, we'd have nothing to say."

A member of Kappa Sigma Rho sorority, Ragan also served as freshman orientation chairman for two years and as Vice-President of the Class of 1974. She also was recording secretary of the College Life Union Board and is currently a member of the Student Center Policy Board.

Commenting on the displacement of student organizations in Life Hall by the planned relocation of Dr. Donald Mintz, dean of the School of Fine and Performing Arts, Ragan said, "I'd like to see a compromise. Several groups have been affected by giving the Rec Lodge to the Drop-In Center and moving Dean Mintz out of the lodge. It's ended up turning students against students. The Jewish Student Union holds Hebrew classes and needs a place to conduct them."

THE DARK-HAIRED candidate said that one possible solution is to partition the snack bar and that an SGA legislator is also looking into classroom use in the fine arts building to see if space is available.

Interviewed in her Lodi home, Ragan discussed the Student Center Policy Board. She explained that the board can advise the center's director on any matter, but he does not have to accept its advice. "The policy board is separate from the SGA, but we are represented on it. The SGA can't go in and take control; we can push for it but don't have to the right to insist on it. I believe there is a stipulation with the center's bondholders that the building must have a full-time director."

Wayne Russin

Unity Brings Strength

while in high school.

At Tuesday's MONTCLARION press conference, Russin called for student mobilization and organization as a means of wielding student power.

Russin also feels it is necessary for the state colleges to organize and meet on a regular basis. He believes the colleges "can do things, if they join together."

Russin said that the Class One organizations were "too autonomous" and should be "responsive to the SGA." He also criticized the SGA, saying it often "rubberstamped" organization budgets.

He also declared that he "would not sign any bill not responsive to the students as a whole."

Wayne Russin

MSC students may opt to write in their personal choices for SGA positions when they vote this coming Monday and Tuesday.

The procedure to do so is both fast and simple, according to SGA president Sam Crane.

To write in a vote, a student must bring a pen or pencil into the voting booth with him. In the booth, the candidates for each office will be listed in separate rows. There will also be rows containing the three referendum questions. At the end of each row will be a space for one write in vote in that category. All the voter must do is open the sliding door covering the ballot. He may then write in his candidate's name and depress the lever beside the ballot. When the curtain is opened, his vote is recorded and a blank ballot rolls into place in the slot. There is no way for the next voter to know what was written in. A voter may not both write in a candidate and depress another lever in that same category, Crane warned. Only the first vote registered in each category is recorded.

Poll workers will be on hand throughout the election to assist voters and answer questions. They will be armed with information sheets and diagrams to aid confused voters.

SGA SECRETARY :

...shall maintain all records and files of the Student Government Association, Inc.

Maggie Capuano

Because the Montclair State student body "has little knowledge of what the SGA is and how it can work for them," Maggie Capuano wants to work to make the SGA more "communicative." She feels she can "relate to dorm life and various campus problems" because she has experienced both on and off campus living.

The business major pointed out that she has experience in both typing and shorthand. She currently serves as clerk to the SGA. Because the organization's secretary was out student teaching Capuano was sometimes called upon to assume her duties.

Capuano has served on the House Council at Bohn Hall. In addition, she is also a member of the Personnel Advisory Committee (PAC) for the department of business administration sciences.

"A secretary should not allow herself to be limited by the literal scope of her position," said Blanche Smith, candidate for SGA secretary. "If elected not only would I fulfill the job requirements, but would also work on student oriented causes outside the SGA," she continued. Smith, a sophomore economics major, is currently an active member of the presidential search committee. She is also a member of the Task Force Against Racism subcommittee of financial aids/student employment.

Blanche Smith:

Not Limited

SGA TREASURER ■ ...shall disburse all monies appropriated by the Student Legislature.

By Liz Hamilton
Staff Writer

Miguel Mena, candidate for SGA treasurer, was discussing rumors that the college administration might try to take control of SGA funds. "If that happens, I will personally fight

Miguel
Mena:

skin-and-teeth in opposition."

The sophomore psychology major explained that the key to SGA power is money and student support. "If there are a lot of financial problems in the SGA, students might not trust other students and might turn to the administration," he explained.

Besides his position as assistant treasurer, Mena has served as an SGA rep for uncommitted students and president of the Latin American Students Association. He also spent one year as the MONTCLARION's business manager.

One of this year's candidates for SGA treasurer is Maria Oliva, a sophomore majoring in child services in the home economics department.

She has been involved with the SGA since her freshman year. Oliva

Maria

said she would work to strengthen it as a student organization. Many students feel that the SGA is an elite group, she continued, and students should be aware that it represents them and it is there for their benefit.

Along with serving as an SGA legislator, Oliva works on the Appropriations Committee with the present SGA treasurer, Diana Terlizzi. She is also treasurer for the sophomore class. Oliva served as chairwoman of Who's Who in American Colleges and has worked on the SGA elections committee.

Clive Brown

"I think the work of the treasurer should be broadened," stated Clive Brown, candidate for SGA treasurer. He feels that the duty of the treasurer is to be a financial controller which covers more territory than the restrictive "glorified bookkeeper" duties of a treasurer.

He has experience working in the New York Stock Exchange and the First National City Bank of New York.

As treasurer he would "try to maintain a device for the more stringent control of the disbursement of cash."

VOTE!! VOTE!! VOTE!! VOTE!!

King Gets Our Vote

The upcoming SGA elections present a very difficult decision in choosing the four people who will determine the future course of the SGA.

Confusing is a good word to describe the campaigns thus far. No candidate has presented any new or different proposals which make him or her stand out. A possible exception are the proposals of presidential candidate Wayne Russin to run the SGA according to the dictates of Mao Tse-tung. His uniqueness, unfortunately, removes him from the ranks of the serious candidates.

Because the remainder of the candidates present similar promises for the future, it is necessary to look to past performance in choosing the best candidate.

We support Michael King for the position of SGA president. Through his work in obtaining the Drop-In Center, King has proven himself to be a hard worker who, upon setting a goal, will work tirelessly to obtain it.

After last year's SGA executive elections, a group of defeated candidates united to protest what they considered to be unfair election procedures. Although the protest eventually fizzled out, the signatures of many students had been obtained on petitions protesting the elections.

It was King who did the leg work in obtaining the signatures. He was the driving force behind the movement if not the most vocal. It is this quiet dedication that will make him a very good president if elected.

Among the candidates for the remainder of the offices, the only one who draws interest is Clive Brown, candidate for SGA treasurer. Brown has a comprehensive knowledge of finances and wins our support for the position. His experiences in the stock market and in banking will prove invaluable if elected.

Percentage Must Lower

Referendums have long proved an obstacle in the path of any change that affects the student body as a whole. Any major change that affects the entire campus must be put to a referendum but the referendum will not take effect unless 30% of the students vote in the election.

Unless the issue concerns money, it is almost impossible to get 30% of the students out to vote and, as a result, referendums very often fail.

The first referendum question calls for the lowering of this 30% requirement. It would require only 15% voter turnout to pass future referendums.

This referendum must be passed or referendums will continue to be a failure. Of course, unless 30% of the voters show up, the percentage can't be lowered.

The second referendum question concerns the lowering of the cum requirement for SGA office from 2.5 to 2.0. This must also be passed because there is no reason why the SGA should not be consistent with the college policy of maintaining a 2.0 cum.

A cum requirement often exists in organizations for the purpose of excluding certain people. It serves the same purpose in this case and they are people that the SGA cannot afford to lose.

The last referendum question asks "should classes be funded?" The class structure has been largely unsuccessful but that does not mean that it is totally undeserving of funds. The classes do render a smaller type of programming that often cannot be obtained from the Class One organizations.

The concept of a class board or council is a good one. The classes would be more effective as a single organization than four floundering ones.

To Forget is No Reward

In the past few weeks I have come across two eloquent pleas concerning post-Vietnam behavior in America. The first, by Russell Baker, calls for a cooling-off period: a time when the POWs should be hurrahed long enough as some compensation for their wasted years, a time when questions of amnesty and war crimes should be neatly tucked away for a time when passions and convictions have lost some of their intensity. This is a time for neither rejoicing, rejoinder nor reflection. It is a time, Baker feels, for a brief, temporary spell of collective forgetfulness.

The second plea comes from Sister Elizabeth McAllister, who argues that not only should we never forget what hell took place in southeast Asia, but also should never forget our collective responsibility for creating that hell. The problem is not a question of lowering but of heightening our concern — not a question of pricking a few individual consciences, but of an outright jousting match with the conscience of a nation.

"THEY"

For all too many of us, the issue at hand will seem irrelevant. How can we remember or forget something which we never saw, felt or experienced first hand? For years, the horrors of Vietnam had been reduced to the dimensions of our television sets. Our wrath had been directed (or our apathy had been non-directed) to an indefinite, amorphous aggregate called "they".

Are we mature enough to turn that wrath upon ourselves for our collective guilt? For how can we have hope for mankind if we entertain no hope for each man? Dare we forget that "crimes committed against humanity" are crimes committed against individual humans? That gross indifference to the anguish of others amounts to a gross indifference to the condition of our own souls?

BALM

Some may argue that forgetfulness is a balm which aids time in healing wounds, in soothing those who still cry out for revenge. But what do we remember about a war? The dates, the places, the times, the tonnage of bombs dropped, the winner, the loser. We remember the statistics. Do we remember all the mothers' sons? The lost limbs and lives? The accumulated decibels of screams? The tormented souls? These are the mind-convulsing realities of war; these are the first things to be forgotten as a war ends; these are the last things to be remembered as a war begins.

I agree with Sister McAllister. We cannot allow ourselves to indulge in forgetfulness. Forgetfulness is a reward for the innocent, not the corrupt.

Bias Leads to Boycott

By the Gulf Action Group

The MSC Gulf Action Group agrees with the MONTCLARION editorial of April 12 that Gulf Oil must be opposed. Gulf, one of 30 American companies in "Portuguese" Africa, accounts for twice as much investment as the other 29 combined — a position of dominance unmatched by any single US corporation in neighboring South Africa.

The group also agrees that informed opposition to Gulf is essential, and to this end we are distributing information sheets on campus and have assembled a file of documentation on Gulf's role in Angola that may be consulted in the library. Furthermore, we recommend that a committee of students and faculty constitute itself to review future bids by other oil companies. The Corporate Information Center of the National Council of Churches has offered the use of its files on corporate involvement in southern Africa.

ISOLATIONISM

The extraordinary statements attributed to Mr. Greg Carroll in the same issue of the MONTCLARION cannot go unchallenged. Mr. Carroll apparently agrees "philosophically" with the charges against Gulf but seems unwilling or unable to act on those convictions. Instead he proposes a head-in-the-sand isolationism that comes off badly when set against the denunciations by the UN, by major church bodies and by the leaders of the Angolan struggle for independence of foreign corporate investment in colonialist and racist regimes in southern Africa.

His hasty comment on Gulf's domestic record against discrimination is inaccurate as well as irrelevant. To cite one instance, the Dayton City Council rejected a low bid from Gulf last year because of Gulf's poor minority-hiring record locally. As far as the students employed at the Gulf station are concerned, the Group has made known from the beginning our concern to protect their jobs.

EXCERPT

And as for Mr. Carroll's view that Gulf is not "politically involved" in Angola, the Group offers the following excerpt from a recent article by Robert Sherrill in the Nation:

"We might also bear in mind some of the 'internationalism' of the giant corporation in the past... Recalling the Nazi fifth column set up in South American business establishments, Berle wrote of how the US Government asked our corporations to break off relations with the Hitler underground and of how 'one famous corporation objected, and its vice-president was sent to Washington to argue with the Under Secretary of State. His argument was direct and simple. His corporation, he said, was not in politics of any kind...'"

We would like to take this opportunity to challenge Greg Carroll and any Gulf representative he prefers to debate the issues of the Gulf question some time during the week of April 30 - May 4. Gulf has refused to send a representative to our April 26 forum. Don't buy Gulf!

MONTCLARION Conference

SGA Contenders 'Meet the Press'

By Carla Capizzi
Staff Writer

A dozen contenders for key SGA posts were questioned by students and reporters at a MONTCLARION press conference on Tuesday afternoon.

The annual conference brought together most of the SGA recognized that the SGA "set obtainable goals," be "efficient," and "prove itself." He also stated that the SGA had gone beyond its bounds. Earlier in the conference, he had said he hoped to "bring the SGA home to our students."

Mike King, Drop-In Center director, agreed that the SGA did not vote for the student Board rep, she noted.

Wayne Russin, "running as a Socialist," saw mobilization and organization as the means to wield student power. He suggested organizing students from each county to follow the actions of their state legislators and actively communicate with them.

Genova, King, Ragan and Russin all agreed on the value of interaction with other state colleges. Genova saw such co-operation as a "power base for all state colleges." Ragan felt it would be "beneficial" to MSC to work with other colleges, private as well as state.

The presidential and vice-presidential candidates all acknowledged the presence of a rift between the SGA and the Class One organizations. Genova blamed both groups for the breakdown on communications. He noted that the Class Ones have become "so autonomous they only go to the SGA for money." King felt the organizations should keep the SGA informed of their workings through regular reports. Ragan commented that the SGA had tried to institute the collection of minutes from the organizations in an attempt to maintain communications. Russin stated that the Class Ones should be more "responsive" to the SGA.

COMMUNICATION

Vice-presidential candidates Tom Barrett and Debby Gerdes both suggested that the Class Ones have a representative present at every SGA meeting. Barrett, co-chairman of the Council on Commuter Affairs, urged the Class Ones and the SGA to maintain an "open door policy for communications." Gerdes, a member of the SGA appropriations committee, felt there was also no communication among the Class Ones themselves.

Another vice-presidential candidate, Betty Ann O'Keefe, recommended that the SGA act more as a central steering committee and gear itself more towards present set-up. Miguel Mena and Maria Oliva said they would try the present policies to see how they would work out. However, Clive Brown voiced concern that there might be flaws in the present system's separation of powers.

SERVICES

On other financial matters, the presidential candidates agreed that SGA services like the Drop-In Center and free legal aid should be candidates for that organization's executive positions, as well as current SGA president Sam Crane, lone contender for the student seat on the Board of Trustees.

POWER

A query on the role and implementation of student power received a wide range of responses. Angelo Genova said the SGAs only power at present was to "recommend." The sophomore class president felt that "power lies in accomplishment." He recommended

"have power now," but said that "administrative channels are open." He called for SGA "follow-through" beyond the recommending stage, using "the tools open to us." King also felt the SGA should aim for long term as well as immediate goals.

Current SGA veep Ragan thinks the organization should concern itself with the state and the federal government as well as campus affairs. She pointed to the use of a statewide student union to gain more student power. Such a union could help win a co-ordinating its various organizations. The fourth contender for the number two spot, Chris Breeden, described SGA appropriations as "disgraceful" and called its representation "unbalanced." The Army veteran claimed that allocation of funds "doesn't represent all factors."

The three candidates for treasurer were asked if financial policies would be tightened or followed in their continued. Genova noted that these could be financed out of unappropriated surplus without depleting organizational budgets. King commented that such services were "relatively inexpensive" and expressed his support of another service, a child day care center. Ragan said she "can't see splitting the money (appropriations) any other way." Russin stated that he would not sign any bill "not responsive to students as a whole."

WOW! IT'S INCREDIBLE, THE NUMBER OF STUDENTS WHO JUST COULDN'T BE BOTHERED TO VOTE... HOW D'YA THINK THE ELECTIONS WOULD'VE TURNED OUT IF WE'D ALL VOTED?

J. D. Hile

Honest Answers Needed

Endorsing candidates for student elections was never one of my favorite pastimes. It's a losing proposition sure to make enemies and few friends. So this year I will follow better judgment and let the contenders battle it out.

However, I think the reader should be informed as to how important the forthcoming elections are. Those of you who intend to sit on your duffs can now turn elsewhere since this concerns a foreign topic - involvement.

This column will be brief. For the past two years the SGA has been wallowing in various stages of mediocrity. We've had one chief-exec who showed a benign neglect of the legislature, and the organization declined. These last two semesters a man full of non-committal platitudes has allowed the SGA to believe it is in control of student affairs.

DANGER

It would indeed be wonderful if this blatant lie were true. But it isn't and what's worse the SGA is in grave danger of being financially castrated due to executive bungling. Yet, the upcoming elections allow some optimism.

Students have the chance of turning things around. All three leading candidates are qualified for the job of presidency. But the one who deserves the support is the one who can answer the following questions.

Will the next chief-exec have a plan for actualizing student power? By this I mean a vote on the Board of Trustees and control of various college functions — like perhaps the Student Center? No broad statements on this subject please, just honest commitment.

ANSWERS

Will forthright answers replace idiotic "no comment" rebuffs in the next administration? This is what was largely responsible for the faltering of SGA - Class One organizational relationships.

Finally, will the new president be willing not to compromise the executive position by accepting on-campus jobs or by allowing power to go to his or her head?

The person who can honestly answer these questions in a positive sense should be the next president of the SGA.

Election Poll

Presidential Lead Slim

By Carol Giordano
Staff Writer

A poll taken Tuesday by MONTCLARION staff members indicates that none of the SGA presidential candidates had a substantial lead as election campaigning got under way.

Current SGA vice-president Kathy Ragan held a slim lead over sophomore class president Angelo Genova, with Michael King, SGA public relations director and Drop-In Center leader, running third.

Tom Barrett, SGA legislator, apparently leads other vice-presidential hopefuls Chris Breeden, Debbie Gerdes, and Betty O'Keefe.

UNDECIDED

The large number of undecided voters places a great deal of importance on this week's campaign and renders any possible predictions unreliable at this time.

MSC students rejected two of the three referendum questions that will appear on the SGA ballot next Monday and Tuesday. By a 56.7% to 27.6% margin those sampled turned down a proposal to lower the percentage of the student body required to vote in order to amend the SGA constitution and to validate results of referendum questions. 61.4% did not approve of a measure to lower the required cumulative average of candidates from 2.5 to 2.0.

The students polled did, however, favor retaining the academic classes (freshman, sophomore, junior and senior) as Class One organizations receiving a budget and funds from the SGA.

Ballotting was conducted randomly in various campus locations including the Student Center, Life Hall, Sprague Library, Partridge Hall and the math-science, music and fine arts buildings.

SciFi 'Soylent'

A Real Shocker

By Hal Plain
Staff Reviewer

"Soylent Green's" virtues and faults both stem from the basic premise of the film. Intended as a warning against the damage we are doing to our environment, the film as such does its job well. However, it does suffer the fault that most films of its genre have — the plot is so one-sided and forced that it tends to be simpleminded and unreal.

The screenplay by Stanley R. Greenberg, adapted from "Make Room, Make Room!" by Harry Harrison, deals with a society which is in the final stages of destroying itself through over-population and pollution. Food and space are at the bare minimum for many while a few still live in luxury. Violence is perpetual, from food riots to the psychological and moral destruction of women as "furniture" who come with the apartments of the rich. They don't complain; at least they eat and live well.

CORRUPTIONS OF our own era, from Watergate to the Pentagon Papers, have been carried to their logical-illogical extreme. Everyone from the governor of the state to the police, right through prive industry, is on the take.

Essentially a murder mystery, "Soylent Green" is the search for a secret that has profound importance to the continuation of mankind. The murdered man was an executive of the most powerful force in the society, the food company. The secret revolves around Soylent Green, a highly nutrititious food concentrate. There is something wrong with the food substitute and when the secret is discovered, it's a real shocker.

The film stars Charlton Heston, the screen's most experienced time traveler, Leigh Taylor-Young and Edward G. Robinson in his last role before his death. "Soylent" co-stars Chuck Connors, Joseph Cotton, Brock Peters and Paula Kelly. The acting is two dimensional and stereotyped except for police agent Heston and Robinson, who plays a police "book," a former professor who, in a time when one needs professors, does research for the police. Robinson is a joy to watch.

Still the film is worth seeing. Its message is clear — a society cannot feed off itself and survive.

Deep Purple: Playing With Fire

By Kathy Czado
Staff Reviewer

What happens when the casino a rock group was supposed to record their new album in is burned to the ground?

The Montreux, Switzerland gambling casino was left in ashes, forcing the group to look elsewhere for a place to record. They combed the city and finally came upon an old hotel which wasn't quite grand but was functional. Sectioning off a hallway, they put a few mattresses around and in three weeks came out with their best album yet.

"Smoke on the Water," probably the most catchy tune on the album, rips through the scene of the burning casino: "We all came out to Montreux On the Lake Geneva shoreline To make records with a mobile We didn't have much time Frank Zappa and The Mothers Were at the best place around

But some stupid with a flare gun Burned the place to the ground Smoke on the water, fire in the sky."

As Circus magazine's June 1973 issue said: "The rhythmic squeals of Ritchie Blackmore's guitar leap like tongues of fire into the introduction, then rise higher as John Lord's throaty organ and Ian Paice's rumbling bass enter one by one to feed them fuel. Finally, the soft, charcoal grit of Ian Gillan's voice eases the story of the Montreux fire into rocking blaze."

Collegium Musicum

Krumphorns and Sackbuts -- Beautiful Music

The Montclair State College Collegium Musicum will present its only concert this season on Sun.,

Kent LaRue
Musicum Member
On the Lute.

April 29, at 4 pm in MSC's McEachern Recital Hall.

The Collegium Musicum is a loose aggregate of musicians interested in authentic performance of medieval and Renaissance music. The group meets informally each week with Thomas Wilt, its director, to study and play works of the 15th, 16th and 17th centuries. Such music, according to Wilt, utilizes many old instruments which until recently were found only in museums.

In the group performing on April 29 Wilt, who plays treble viol, bass viol and recorders and an alumnus, Edmund Moderacki on recorders, krumphorn and sackbut, will be joined by four undergraduate music students: Heather Hall, recorders and cross flute, Patricia Ferrara, bass recorder and harpsichord, Linda Morris, soprano and recorders and Kent LaRue, lute and percussion.

"This music," Wilt says, "has great charm and beauty and is reaching more of the general public each year. As four or five hundred years have elapsed since the music was written, performance knowledge is very meager and all old music buffs exercise considerable scholarship, practical musicianship and creative imagination in their performances."

During the first part of the program secular music by Dufay, Obrecht, Josquin, Gabrieli and Schein will be heard. Following intermission the consort will perform English music by J Doland, Tye and Purcell.

The group, which is completely self-funded, was first heard in the Montclair State Players production of "As You Like It."

Ticket information may be obtained by calling 893-5231.

DYNAMIC DUO

Anita D'Aquino, mezzo-soprano and Jeffrey Buhrman, baritone, will present a joint recital on Fri., April 27 at 8 pm in McEachern Recital Hall. The two MSC juniors will be accompanied by pianist Helen Podence and harpist Jody Freeman. For two early 17th century pieces Dan Moore will accompany them on the harpsichord. The singers will perform several duets as well as solos. Both the baritone and mezzo-soprano have recently completed a television production of Monteverdi's "Il Combattimento di Tancredi e Clorinda," in which they sang the title roles.

There was no vacation for the Montclair State men's tennis team during the Easter break. The squad made good use of the respite from study to string up five opponents and compile their present 6-0 record.

Showers washed out Monday's doubles competition against Newark State, but with the Indians leading 6-0 at the end of singles play, the final result was already decided.

JOHN DONLEYCOTT and Al Huie each took 12 straight games, winning their matches, 6-0, 6-0. Kevin Schmidt lost only one game in 13 as he registered a 6-0, 6-1 victory.

Tom Krukeil led the squad in Saturday's 6-3 win over New York University. The sophomore bested Dan Venet in straight sets, 6-2, 6-0, and teamed with Donleycott in first doubles to take Venet and Ron Bremberg, 6-2, 6-4.

Jersey City was the Indians' fourth victim of the year, falling to the MSC team, 7-2. Schmidt and Huie led the onslaught with singles victories over Mike Pechles and Pete Washo, respectively. Dave Rothman combined with Huie to top Jersey City's Nick Poitewik and Bruce Houghlaling, 6-2, 7-5.

PREVIOUSLY, THE team had scored their second whitewash of the season, blanking Seton Hall, 9-0, in a rescheduled contest. The Indians allowed the Pirates only one set the entire match.

Glassboro State gave MSC a run for it, giving them the closest contest to date. But the Indians took the April 14 match, 5-4, on the doubles win of Kim Marchese and George List. The MSC duo, despite suffering a first set loss, 5-7, came back to defeat John Dannenhaur and Scott Magann, 6-4 and 6-2.

Montclair State students may not be able to mimic actress Victoria Medlin on the Vitalis commercials by slapping Pete Rose in the gut, but they will be going at each other one-on-one under the boards ala the NBA Vitalis-sponsored one-on-one tournament.

The action commences on Wednesday at 7 pm in the main gyms with the preliminary contests taking place on the wood backboards and the finals under the plexiglass. If necessary, the finals will be conducted on Thursday night.

THE RULES are similar to the NBA one-on-one regulations. Each game will consist of 20 points with the winner having to hold at least a four-point margin. There will be a 12-minute limit on each game.

SOFTBALL AND SLO PITCH

In addition to the one-on-one tournament, the Intramurals Department is also offering a men's softball league and a co-ed slo-pitch league during the spring.

The men's league will begin play on Sunday, May 6, and play on Sundays only. Registration is open until noon on Wednesday.

THE CO-ED league will play Mondays through Thursdays and begin action on Monday, May 7. Registration will close on noon next Thursday.

Applications are available at the Student Center information desk and the Intramural Office in the basement of College High School. Students can also apply during the evenings, Sundays through Thursdays, 7-9:45 pm, at the night office of the Intramural Department located in the lobby of Panzer Gym at the snack bar.

P-Q4 AND ALL THAT

Deadline for the first round of the chess tournament is Monday at noon. All score sheets of games played must be handed in by that time to the Intramural Office, basement of College High School, for the games to be officially counted and pairings for the second round established.

Stickmen Hummin' The 2nd Half Blues

By Joan Miketzuk
Sports Writer

It's called the "second half letdown blues," and while it doesn't bite babies and dogs, it sure hits lacrosse teams hard.

Lately, it's been hitting the Montclair State lacrosse team with some vicious poke checks. But last Wednesday was the backbreaker as the Indians fell to Fairleigh Dickinson University (Teaneck) 4-3, when the Knights scored three goals in the second half.

BILL NEVILLE tallied an unassisted goal in the first quarter to open the scoring and give FDU a 1-0 edge. MSC fought back, though, and managed to take the lead before the first stanza ended.

Houston Webber answered Neville's goal with an unassisted marker of his own and also originated the play that led to Bill Paladino's third goal of the season.

Webber put another shot by goalie Paul Molinczak before the whistle ended the half and the Indians relaxed with a 3-1 halftime lead.

BUT THE "second half letdown blues" feeds on such things as relaxation and thrives in the climate of cooling perspiration. Thus it wasn't long before Neville put the Knights within one with a little help from Mike McKenna.

Jim Cotter knotted the score and McKenna fed Nash for the gamewinner in the fourth period. Netminder Bob Heath handled 13 shots to Molinczak's nine.

A few days earlier, on the infamous Friday the 13th, the "blues" decided to go easy on the Indians when they hosted City College of New York. Starting off strong with a four-goal first period, the Indians faltered in the third stanza, but rallied for two goals in the fourth period to make the final score 8-2.

WEBBER CONVERTED a pass from middle George Fabian, Carmine Cuzzo put an unassisted goal by CCNY netminder Mike Rispoli and Bill Davies scored his first goal of the season on a pass from Paladino. All before the first period was 10 minutes old.

The barrage sent CCNY reeling, but they came up with a goal of their own when MSC was a man down. Gary Kunkel put a shot by goalie Heath who stopped 12 such shots that afternoon before yielding his position to backup Ian Foreman late in the fourth quarter.

But Webber and Paladino went back on the attack and the former tallied his second goal of the afternoon on an assist from the latter. In the second session, Rich Keller put MSC up 5-1, converting a Webber pass for his first goal of the season.

PALADINO ALSO scored before the half ended.

But the "blues" could not resist a little fun and as coach Al Jackson worriedly paced the sidelines, George Najjar netted an unassisted goal to pull CCNY to within four.

Webber settled the team down with the last of his hat tricks (three goals) before Rudy Simek scored his first of the year.

THE TEAM will host New York Maritime College tomorrow at 4 pm at Brookdale Park. MSC will also meet Southampton College on Tuesday at 3:30 pm at Brookdale.

MSC Nine Falters

You win some, you lose some. But why is it that with the MSC baseball team, the some you win aren't nearly as important as the some you lose?

Over the past two weeks, the Indians have beaten New York Institute of Technology, 9-0, Newark State by the same score, and William Paterson, 15-9. So far, so good. Now for the flipside. The tribe was beaten by Newark State, 7-1, (figure that one out), lost a heartbreaker to Glassboro, 2-1, and threw away almost any hope for an NJSACC title by handing a game to Trenton State, 11-6.

MSC NOW stands at 3-3 in the league and have just about nailed down the lid on their coffin by playing so haphazardly as to contribute to Trenton State's 4-0 conference mark by committing five errors (three in one inning) in their most recent league contest Saturday.

In that catastrophe, Trenton State exploded for five runs in the sixth inning on only three hits. However, three crucial fielding blunders on behalf of the hometeam did the trick for the Lions.

With the bases loaded, on errors Lion pitcher Chet Snook (with a name like that, how can you lose?) came up and promptly belted the ball over the left field fence.

SUDDENLY COLLINS found himself trailing 7-5, wondering how it all happened. The tribe never did catch up. Collins suffered his first defeat in three mound assignments.

The previous Saturday saw MSC fireballer Rich Waller strike out 12 batters, walk only one and allow just three hits against Glassboro State at Glassboro. There was one minor problem however. The Profs just happened to win the game.

Here's how it happened: With the score 1-1 in the eighth inning, Bruce Carter went to first on a force play, stole second, got up and dusted himself off and scrambled over to third on a wild pitch. He came home on a headsup play after Dale Woodward grounded to third and the throw went to first.

WHAT MAKES matters worse is that MSC clubbed 10 hits and left 15 men stranded on base. How much more can a team take? That remains to be seen.

IN ANOTHER scorekeeper's nightmare, MSC throttled league rival William Paterson, 15-9, Thursday, scoring five runs in the sixth inning with the score 6-3 in their favor. Waller, coming back from the Glassboro loss, went 6-1/3 innings, struck out 12, walked three and allowed seven runs on eight hits to even his record at 1-1. Tony Scarlatelli blasted two homers for the Indians accounting for five runs. Cosentino also homered.

THE STRETCH AND THE PITCH: Rich Waller goes into a windup against Adelphi University on Tuesday. The MSC freshman suffered his second loss, allowing four runs in eight innings and striking out nine. The Indians were only able to muster one run in the game on three hits as four errors did them in.

PASSING THE BUCK? Coach George Horn's "not complaining" even though his MSC track team dropped four out of five contests over the Easter holiday. "We had seven guys in Florida, that's why we lost to Paterson," Horn explained. The team did better than usual in last Tuesday's quadrangular meet, despite losing to St. John's University, Central Connecticut State College, and Fairleigh Dickinson University. "At least we came close," offered Horn. "Usually Fairleigh beats us by 60 points or more. This time it was only six points." The trackmen have one more meet, at Trenton April 30, and go from there into a number of championships to conclude the season.

Golfers Stumble But Trip Helps

"You can't learn to play golf on the blackboard," said Montclair State College golf coach Jerry DeRosa. "This is why our trip was such a helpful kind of a thing," he added.

The stocky, genial PGA pro was speaking last Tuesday in Life Hall about the golf team's Easter Vacation trip to Virginia Beach, Va.

"IT WAS a very helpful clinic type of thing. By means of such a workshop I could get together with the kids and go over the game," DeRosa continued.

Three players, Bob Nitzewitz, Tim O'Brien and Russ Parkhurst traveled from Tuesday, the 17th, til Saturday, the 21st. They played Newport News Country Club, Elizabeth Manor, and on Friday, Williamsburg Country Club ("The best," said DeRose, "a real monster.")

Upon their return, the golfers lost, Monday, to Glassboro. This 13-5 defeat, combined with an overtime playoff loss to Newark Rutgers Apr. 12, losses to East Stroudsburg State College and William Paterson College ("Good matches," said DeRosa) and an opening victory over Monmouth College for a 1-4 record.

"I've never coached a losing season," said DeRosa, "I think we're going to get better though," he grinned.

THE COACH said O'Brien was "really coming along."

"His tying Steve Tucker (GSC) was a tremendous deal," the silver haired coach added. Tom Rucsincki, recently involved in a bad car accident, is also doing a "tremendous job." Billy Asdal continued business as usual, beating tough Greg Farrow, a Miami transfer, in the Glassboro match. His record is 27-5.

"We've got to get more experience and play more matches," explained DeRosa. "Next year we're going to fit our schedule into vacation."

"Next year?" Already?
